THE DAILY NEWS.

BY FRANK O. TICKNOR The Douglas, knightliest of old, In his last journeying, Wore at his heart, encased in gold, The heart of Bruce, his King.

Through Paynim lands to Palestine, Befall what peril might, To lay that beart on Christ, his shrine, He journeyed day and night.

By night and day, a weary way, Of vigil and of fight, Where never rescue came by day, Nor ever rest by night. And one by one the valiant spears Were stricken from his side; And one by one his heavy tears Fell for the brave who died.

Till fierce and black around his track

He saw the combat close, And counted but a single sword Against uncounted foes. He drew the cashet from his breast, He bared his solemn brow, Oh! foremost of the knightnest, Go first in battle, now!

Where leads my Lord of Bruce, the sword Of Douglas shall not stay; Forward! we meet at Christ, his feet, On Paradise to-day?

The casket flashed, the battle clashed, Thundered and rolled away; And dead above the heart of Bruce The heart of Douglas lay.

Loyal? Methinks the antique mould Is left on theirs alone, Who sheltered Freedom's heart of gold, Like Douglas with their own.
